Real seat view: the section to pick (Best Seat Hack static)

DUE	SIZES	VERSIONS
Fri, Nov 13	1080×1350 1080×1920	4 4 of 25 images this month

A real phone photo from a real seat, with one big line naming the seat most people skip and a small line saying why.

Fallback: if the client can't name the seat, V1 and V2 run 'Know the seat before you buy.' with the subline 'Our ticket experts are here to help.' over a real seat-view photo.

WHY IT WORKS

The ticket experts know every arena seat by seat, and an ad that names one seat and the reason for it proves that knowledge in a single glance (Source: Brand Bible 2a; client memory 'the knowledge sells the ticket'). The actual seat and its reason come from the founder or the sales lead (examples on file are sun angles, obstructed rows and value sections). It shows as a small tag on the photo naming the section and the reason. The layout borrows the structure of a market ad live 31 days: one big line, a plain panel and a real photo (Source: market ad M1).

WHO IT'S FOR

Game-Day Local, who wants good seats from local people they trust.

Targeting is the media buyer's call.

"Our ticket experts know why."	a real phone photo taken from the seat, with a small tag giving the section and the reason (from the client's answer).	headline, then the seat view and tag, then the small logo.	A small Best Tickets logo, like the reference's corner brand mark.

DO AND DON'T

DO

- + A real phone photo of a real seat view, raw and organic-looking.
- + Headline big and readable on a phone at arm's length, on a plain panel in the site's whites and blues.
- + A small Best Tickets logo, like the reference's corner brand mark.
- + The seat tag uses only the insight the client confirms, word for word.
- + One message per image. No on-image CTA.

DON'T

- × No AI-generated video, images or voices (client rule), and no AI edits to the photo.
- × No price, 'cheap', 'best prices', urgency or parking lines, and no 'premium' as the claim.
- × No team logos, player or artist photos, event names or dates.
- × Don't name or picture other ticket sites, and don't lead negative.
- × No guarantee, fee or checkout claims, and no faces of reps or customers.

CONFIRM WITH CLIENT · DOESN'T HOLD THE WORK

- ? Which seat, at which venue, and why?
- ? Are statics OK in November? On Nov 9 the client set evergreen to video only. Check before making it.
- ? Can we show the venue interior in the photo?
- › If not: V3 and V4 test the approved line 'Best Seats, Best Service = Best Tickets!' as the headline on the same designs. That payoff is the staff's seat-by-seat knowledge, which needs no new fact.
